

2016 REPORT TO DONORS

To Our Donor Family:

Intermountain Foundation's call is bold: invest in redefining patient care and access for all through innovation, research, education, and community programs. During 2016, a record number of visionary donors responded, turning their passions and interests into reality. Here are a few:

Never shy to big ideas, developer Kem Gardner is tackling one of the biggest: transforming healthcare. He is committing $20 million toward the construction of the Intermountain Transformation Center, being built on the campus of the Intermountain Medical Center. The center aims to re-engineer healthcare to consistently provide the best clinical outcomes for patients, at sustainable costs. It will serve as a gathering place and resource for healthcare professionals across the nation.

In honor of his mother who passed away from cancer, Utah Valley business leader Blake Roney and his family gave a remarkable $5 million gift to the Cancer Center at Utah Valley Hospital. Part of a dramatic $430 million building and renovation effort, the center will further a holistic and multi-disciplinary approach to cancer care, fostering the best clinical outcomes.

A long-tenured Intermountain Healthcare board member, Paul T. Kunz, is memorialized at the new Cardiac Fitness Institute on the McKay-Dee Hospital campus. Donor Sharee Kunz made a generous $200,000 gift in memory of her late husband, which was then matched by board member Tim Dee and his family's Foundation.

Born eight weeks premature, the grandson of St. George businessman Jack Renouf received superb care at Dixie Regional Medical Center's NICU. Now a strapping toddler, Jack's grandson is the inspiration behind a generous $500,000 gift, which will consolidate high quality Women & Newborn Services as part of the hospital's substantial expansion project.

The relationship between Smith's Food and Drug and Primary Children's Hospital dates back to founder Dee Smith, whose granddaughter was a heart patient. In 2016, Smith's customers, vendors, and associates continued that legacy, contributing $1.4 million to the hospital's charity care program. With 24 years of annual fundraising for Primary Children's, Smith's cumulative giving exceeds $14 million.

A heart attack is often personally devastating. For businessman and grateful patient Dell Loy Hansen, the experience prompted an extraordinary $4 million contribution to Intermountain Research and Medical Foundation. This gift from Dell Loy and his wife Lynnette is driving innovative cardiovascular research, dramatically improving treatment and clinical outcomes for thousands of heart patients.

Indeed, 2016 was a remarkable year, highlighted by gifts from donors totaling $61 million. These dollars will meaningfully impact countless lives and families throughout the Intermountain West. By joining forces with visionary supporters, Intermountain Healthcare is poised to serve patient needs in ways that previously couldn't have been imagined. On behalf of everyone who looks to Intermountain as a beacon of hope and healing, thank you for your generosity.
