Conference Description

During the period of transport, critically ill neonates and children are at risk from disease, injury, and the transport itself. This risk can be minimized by good communication between the referring and receiving providers, careful evaluation and management, anticipation of complications, and a well-equipped and well-trained team. This two-day course provides a comprehensive approach to clinical issues related to neonatal and pediatric transport.

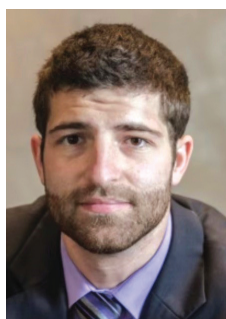

Keynote Speaker

Jim Green, PM

Jim Green has worked in health care for 27 years as a clinician, educator, public safety education director, agency consultant and program administrator. He is currently serving as the Critical Care Transport Program Manager at Penn State Health's Hershey Medical Center. Jim is a Flight Paramedic with 14 years of operational flight experience that currently oversees the daily operation of Life Lion Critical Care Transport, an air medical response and ground transport program based in Hershey, Pennsylvania. Jim is also a critical care educator and contributing author for an international critical care transport educational platform and he teaches exactly as he practices, with a passion to help others.

He began in health care in 1997 as a Doctor of Chiropractic and shortly after the events of 9/11 transitioned to a career in Emergency Medical Services. Along the way Jim has remained committed to continuously developing himself as a person, provider and leader, through the dedicated study of how core values impact both personal performance and professional outcomes. With his unique experience he enjoys creatively inspiring those around him in public safety to become the best personal version of themselves, in order to become the best possible provider. Jim is the founder and director of Mission Ready, a program that is dedicated to first responder professional development and promoting excellence in the field.

Life Flight Annual Memorial Speaker

Jon Hochstein, MD

Jon Hochstein received a heart transplant from Primary Children's in Salt Lake City on February 11, 1999. His experience as a child transplant recipient revealed a vocation to medicine. He did his undergraduate training in biomedical engineering at Johns Hopkins University and went to Harvard Medical School.

He completed a year in pediatrics residency before switching to the cardiothoracic surgery residency training program at Stanford. He hopes to become a pediatric cardiothoracic surgeon to help other kids have the opportunity to pursue their dreams, just like his doctors/nurses and clinical staff gave to him.
